Lancaster, PA – Fabral's Woodframe Business Unit is pleased to announce the 2008 Project of the Year winners – Cleary Building Corp, National Barn, R&D Cross, and Meyer Building.

For the past nine years, Fabral has held the Project of the Year contest to recognize excellent projects in the post frame, light commercial and residential markets. Five finalists in each category were displayed at Fabral's booth at the 2008 NFBA Frame Building Expo and were voted on by show attendees. Winners were then selected and will receive a cash prize, plaque, and a scholarship to the school of their choice.

The five categories and winners for the 2008 Project of the Year include:

Scott Bacon, Director of Sales & Marketing, states “By continuing the tradition of Project of the Year, we are able to showcase our customers’ best work. The fact that the winners are selected by their peers speaks volume about the level of quality and workmanship exhibited. By allowing the winners to select a school as the scholarship recipient, we are able to partner with our customers and support them as they give back to their communities. We are proud to be a small part of these projects.”
